PUBLIC OUTREACH

In addition to disseminating research findings to the academic community, my communication strategy commits to reaching out to non-academic audiences.

First, I am interested in exchanging information and ideas with relevant actors from civil society and politics. For this purpose, we have established a civil society advisory board with members from different types and sectors. Furthermore, I have co-organized events with various non-academic partners, amongst others, with the Swiss Embassy in Berlin, the Protestant Academy in Tutzing, the Civil Society Networks Stiftungen und Bildung and the Bundesnetzwerk Bürgerschaftliches Engagement BBE. I am also involved in research projects which closely collaborate with transdisciplinary partners from civil society. To advocate for the use and ensure the quality of transdisciplinary research and multi-directional knowledge exchange, I am also a member of the steering committee of the Berlin University Alliance (BUA) responsible for the implementation of these activities across the four partner institutions (Freie Universität, Humboldt-Universität, Technische Universität and Charité).

Second, I am regularly featured in the national and international media on topics related to my field of expertise (political conflict, civil society, protest and party politics) and I also take part in public debates and roundtables for the broader public audience.

Finally, I also co-author blog posts and articles aiming at a broader audience. The following is a selection of contributions:
